There is something wonderfully comforting about an old farmhouse-the wide-plank feel of hardwood floors beneath your feet, rooms that feel connected rather than formal, sunlight moving through the windows, and the sense that generations have lived, gathered, cooked, and celebrated here. 1150 Poplar Row Lane captures that feeling beautifully, tucked along a quiet private street in the historic village of Upperville. Set on a full acre, this charming antique farmhouse offers three bedrooms and two full baths, with an easy, inviting floor plan designed for the way people actually live. The main level includes a living room, dining room, kitchen, sunroom, and the practical spaces that make a farmhouse work so well-a mudroom/pantry and laundry just off the kitchen. The kitchen is very much at the heart of the home, connecting everyday life with the dining and living spaces. The sunroom adds another layer of charm-a place to enjoy a morning cup of coffee, curl up with a book, bring in garden flowers, or simply watch the seasons change. Upstairs, three bedrooms and a large full bath offer comfortable private quarters, with hardwood floors throughout adding warmth and continuity to the home. Outside is where the farmhouse lifestyle truly comes to life. The one-acre setting provides room for gardens, outdoor gatherings, and the simple pleasures of having
